Booth Bay Harbor, Maine

Date: 1864

Surveyor: Under the direction of A. D. Bache, Superintendent of the Survey of the Coast of the United States

Area: Booth Bay Harbor, Maine

Dimensions:

Accession #: 16" X 19.5"

Description: This is a trigonometrical survey of the harbor that shows tides and soundings. Canvas-backed.

Framed wall map (hanging on the north side of Room 2) US Coast Survey Eastern Shore of Sheepscot River

Date: 1864

Surveyor: A. D. Bache, Superintendent

Area: Eastern Shore of the Sheepscot River

Dimensions: 31.25" X 37"

Accession #: 08-6-75

Description: A.D. Bache, 2nd supervisor of the US Coast Survey, was charged with making detailed maps of the coast. He did Boothbay in 1864 and 1865. He got Congress to quadruple the budget to get the project done, including printing. These maps are the precursors of all the topographical maps we have today. These maps are different because they have the actual footprints of all the houses, barns, and graveyards. It is believed there are no topographicals of the upper reaches of Boothbay. Francis Greene requested the maps from the US Coast and Geodetic Survey Office in 1888. His grandson's wife, Mrs. Francis Greene III (Florence) donated them to the museum in 2008.
